Re air quality, aviation fuel and noise pollution from HELICOPTERS

I live near to our beautiful Central Park in New York City. I love to walk, watch birds and listen to their birdsong. I am grateful to the Conservancy for giving New Yorkers this immaculate space. I see the park enjoyed by all: little leaguers, tennis players, runners, lots and lots of babies! I see the family groups quietly enjoying picnics, young people gathering and having fun!

Who on earth gave permission for HELICOPTERS to fly a few hundred feet over this oasis, sometimes hovering for a long time, emitting a stink of fuel, and roaring with noise? Why do a few operators and passengers have the unregulated right to destroy the air quality and quiet peace of so many hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers! I have safety concerns, too; how do we know these helicopters won't crash, or be turned into terrorist weapons against the innocents below.

Stop this pernicious selfish practise of low-flying aircraft before mass quality of life and air-quality is gone or there is a catastrophe.

Yours, Kennedy Fraser
